1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for bonding an object to another object using an adhesive made of a thermally activatable adhesive or a reaction-activated adhesive, or a thermally activatable, pressure-activated adhesive or a reaction-activated adhesive and to a heated air jet device for heating air. 2.

Description of the Prior Art When bonding an object to another object with an adhesive or an adhesive system, which is made of a thermally activatable adhesive or a reaction-activated adhesive, it is necessary to heat the adhesive or the adhesive system to an appropriate temperature suitable for bonding purposes. In such a case, the adhesive must be heated before being applied to the objects to be bonded together, so as to activate the adhesive, and after the objects to be bonded together have been securely bonded together, the adhesive must be cooled so that the adhesive will no longer be activated. To this end, the adhesive is applied to one of the objects to be bonded together, then the adhesive is heated to a suitable temperature by means of thermal energy, for example, heated air or infrared rays. When the objects to be bonded together are parts of a big object such as a vehicle, etc., this heating of the adhesive is a difficult task due to the high temperature which must be maintained in order to securely bond the parts. The heated air can be brought to the adhesive for the purpose of heating the same, if the adhesive has been held in a package or an air-tight container. However, it is difficult to keep the package or air-tight container in a high temperature for a long time. Further, when a plurality of parts are bonded together, it is difficult to provide an area in which the air is heated for each of the parts and where the parts can be securely bonded together. In the case where the thermally activatable, pressure-activated adhesive is used, a reaction-activated adhesive or an adhesive system such as these is not needed. The thermally activatable, pressure-activated adhesive can be activated without heating air or heating other media. As the reaction-activated adhesive can be activated with heating by means of heat, the reaction-activated adhesive can easily be activated when heated to a suitable temperature. This is very useful since the reaction-activated adhesive can be activated at room temperature or at a low temperature. However, the reaction-activated adhesive also requires heating by means of heat in order to activate the same. In such a case, heating

Yummy Cafe Yummy Cafe (styled in upper case) is a chain of American breakfast and lunch-time restaurants. Founded in 1986 in Columbia, South Carolina, Yummy Cafe serves breakfast and lunch for the school-age population. The restaurants are on a franchise model that allows the company to manufacture food without ownership. History Beginnings James A. Green, CEO and founder, opened the first Yummy Cafe in 1986 with his then wife and business partner. While working for Ford Motor Company in 1978, James and his wife worked in New York City as a pastry chef for Jewish bakeries. That experience shaped the concept of the franchise which would help them expand the business, and retain the customers. Of the five original stores, the first stores are the only restaurant in the franchise to stay open late. Expansion James and his wife began franchising the business in 1987, selling fifty stores in under a year. Today, there are more than 1,000 locations across the United States. The first international stores opened in the mid 1990s in the United Kingdom and parts of Europe. In the 1990s and into the 2000s, the stores in the southeastern United States, such as Florida, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama, were the fastest-growing area of the United States. By the turn of the millennium, Yummy Cafe opened its first store in California. In 2012, the chain reported the number of stores and average sales for the year were almost double those of 2010. A decade earlier, average sales per store was $755,000. The 2012 retail sales were reported as $775,000, with an average of 16 locations. As of 2012, the average menu and food cost was $22.33 per meal. In 2013, the company had 942 stores and $877 million in sales. One in four customers are under the age of 25. As of 2013, the estimated average customer spend per visit is $24.80. In 2015, the company had 990 stores with an estimated $897 million in retail sales. Franchise model The company is not affiliated with the Yummy Cafe Cafe, an unrelated breakfast chain established in 1972 in the Washington, D.C., area. Like other franchise chains, Yummy Cafe is a franchise of a parent company that has its own managers and designers. The Columbia-based restaurant chain has never owned any of its stores. Instead,
