Twenty-six intracranial ependymomas were imaged pre- and postoperatively with magnetic resonance imaging (MRI). The location, size, histology and signal intensity characteristics were recorded. In particular, T1-weighted and T2-weighted spin-echo and Gd-DTPA-enhanced T1-weighted images were compared with histological classifications and tumor grade. Histological features were used as the gold standard against which the appearance of the tumors on MRI was assessed. Histological classification of ependymomas was performed using the 5-point grading system of the World Health Organization (WHO), and by the presence of frequent or extensive necrosis. Signal intensity was variable for all ependymomas. MRI correctly classified 16 of the 18 WHO grade II ependymomas and 19 of the 8 WHO grade III ependymomas. Histological grade based on WHO classification was in agreement with MRI findings in 22 of the 26 cases, with the remaining 4 cases being grade III based on MRI findings which were subsequently shown to be WHO grade II. In two cases grade III ependymomas were upgraded to grade II based on MRI; and in two cases where grade II tumors were classified as grade III based on MRI, they were upgraded to grade II based on histology. T2-weighted images were found to be the most effective in identifying ependymoma although T1-weighted images often resulted in inappropriate enhancement.Q: Whose heat is an ajna chakra's fuel? I've seen it written that the ajna chakra is fueled with "heat". I can sort of understand it if it's the space/time continuum but the connotation usually attached to heat is that it's energetic and, thus, this whole confusion. A

In some cases, this is the only effective means of protecting your information from the unauthorized.Police in the United Kingdom have been criticized for their handling of the disclosure of thousands of confidential Police National Computer (PNC) records in response to a Freedom of Information request by an undercover journalist at the Independent newspaper. Public and media-interest groups have noted the high number of officers and other individuals who receive unreviewed disclosures of PNC records that have included highly sensitive personal information. The newspaper's legal editor, George Jones, revealed the PNC records to show that undercover police investigated the activities of a number of journalists and others including a suspected terrorist. "In the last two days, thousands of PNC records have been released to us under the Freedom of Information Act," Jones wrote. "The release is b7e8fdf5c8
