I2P is a client-server based anonymizing network enabling users to communicate anonymously. I2P aims to bring anonymity to network users and, in combination with other technologies, solve the problems of whistleblowing, privacy issues of confidential information on the Internet, and censorship. I2P is not a VPN, IP Tunneling, or Anonymous Proxy server, although it uses the same techniques for Tor-like hidden services. This means that internet service providers may see your requests and responses. I2P comes in the form of software clients and services running on a user's computer. The client software (1), or "I2P client" which is a lightweight wrapper around a Tor daemon " allows a user to select the application's protocol language. Most commonly, the client is running a JavaScript interpreter called SGF (2) " the same language used for the tunnel protocol implemented by Tor " and this client is called "Tor Browser" (3).
