The Compound Interest Calculator calculates interest on a specified investment, and provides an easy way to calculate the interest payable on a loan over a specified number of days. Why is it useful? Being able to calculate the interest on an investment can be helpful in determining the amount of interest you will pay over time. For example, you could check the interest on a loan that you plan to take out to finance a purchase to see how much you will have to pay over time. You might also use the tool to calculate the interest on savings, or you could check the income for a month and match it against the monthly payment for a home mortgage. There are several other possible uses for the tool, so if you want to learn more about it, we suggest checking out the FAQ section for more information. Features This calculator is available in an online or desktop version. Both versions provide the same information, but they may provide different results if you use the online version. The online version can be accessed from a web browser; the desktop version can only be accessed from the application itself. Algebraic functions - This calculator has several new features. For example, you can use inverse of a fraction, quadratic function, and exponents. You can also use the compound interest function. This function enables you to add the interest rate on an existing loan to calculate a new interest rate that will be applicable to a new loan. Initial balance - If you have an interest rate and a loan amount, you can use the Initial Balance function to calculate the monthly interest for the loan. In this case, the loan amount is set to a starting balance of $1,000.00. To use this function, enter values for the interest rate, the loan amount, the number of payments, and the number of days in a month. Calculate a monthly payment - You can enter values for the amount of the loan, the interest rate, the number of days in a month, the term of the loan, and the number of payments. The program will calculate the amount of the monthly payment. In the example, we have entered a loan amount of $3,000.00 and a number of days in a month of 30. The amount is calculated using the 0.0203 percent interest rate and the monthly payment amount of $62.00.
