He jumps from the Eiffel Tower to Nazi Germany, and nobody wonders why heâ€™s making it hard for himself.Q: Specify phonecall API endpoint for multiple domain phone numbers We are providing the phonecall API endpoint for which people can make phone calls to our mobile apps. We support the Mutliple Domain / MultiLandline feature, which means that if a caller has a number in your organisation's public phone book, he or she may receive one different number from his or her other phone numbers in your organisation's private phone book. Currently, the phone call API supports the following: endpoint for which to receive the phone call: For example, the phone call API endpoint could be I have identified that we would like to be able to support multiple phone numbers from each number in the public phone book. Does anyone have an idea if there is a way to do this? A: It's not possible to use the API to make a call to a number in a phonebook. You have two options: Call the endpoint and have the caller provide their own number - your application could do the right thing and accept it. Leave out the number and provide it to the caller when it calls your application - presumably you could then show a "This number could not be dialled".
