Q: Is there a parabola described as a conic section by the following vectors? I know there is a (nonspecific) parabola described by $x^2+y^2=6$. Is there a conic section described as the intersection of a parabola and a plane? I don't want to say that it must be a parabola. A: Yes, it's a parabola. Your formula determines a plane $z=6-x^2-y^2$, so you can intersect the parabola with that plane to get a plane that looks like: The equation of a parabola is $y=\frac{a}{2}x^2$, so the intersection of that with the plane defined above is: $\frac{a}{2}x^2 = 6-x^2-y^2$. Multiplying both sides by 2 will give you: $a x^2 = 8 - 2x^2 - 2y^2$ which is what we are looking for. Q: XML Response C# HttpClient - how to get and set particular value of an attribute I am currently working on a prototype of a RESTful API call in C# that invokes a Web API 2 method. Below is an example of the XML document being returned. Internet Access Monitor for Qbik WinGate is a supervising application that can show you all the Internet activities performed by a user on a computer. Related Events GRAND RAPIDS — A federal judge Friday became the first in the nation to issue a permanent injunction against the construction of a federal office building in downtown Grand Rapids. The ruling stems from a lawsuit filed last year by the Center for Biological Diversity to halt construction of the U.S. Geological Survey's Earth Resources Observation System, at 2800 Galbraith Ave. NW. U.S. District Court Judge Robert Jonker issued his ruling just one day after a six-week trial in which the Center for Biological Diversity argued that the new building would imperil a 15-acre park in the heart of the city. "This is the first time I know of a federal judge sitting in a trial in America to issue a permanent injunction against the building of a federal office building," said Charles Erickson, a lawyer for the Center for Biological Diversity. The Center, along with other conservation groups and Native Americans, had argued that the Galbraith Avenue site was one of seven federal land parcels in the city that needed to be permanently protected, citing concerns about threats to the forest, water and biodiversity, and jeopardizing of the chance to save Aragona Island, a remnant of old downtown that is threatened by a planned surface parking lot. U.S. Attorney for Western Michigan William Strampel Jr. said he was in the process of appealing the decision. Strampel said Friday that he could not speculate as to what course of action the Justice Department might pursue, but he said the decision does not change the U.S. Geological Survey's authority to build the office in Grand Rapids. "It changes what the local community will do," Strampel said. "We'll have to revisit our plans, but we don't see this as being a long-term solution." 'One of the most wonderful examples of natural splendor' Chad Benedict, chief of staff for U.S. Rep. Bill Huizenga, R-Zeeland, said the ruling was unfortunate. "It's one of the most wonderful examples of natural splendor that a particular part of the community has," Benedict said. "I believe it was the first time anywhere in the world that a U.S. federal judge blocked construction on these grounds. "
