IrfanView IrfanView is a free, open source Windows image viewer, and it also has a number of image editing features (see Figure 4-17). It is a lightweight image viewer that runs on Windows XP and newer and supports multi-platform formats including TIFF and PNG. IrfanView comes with a Windows installer, but is also available as a MSI installer for Windows Vista and Windows 7. For Mac users, there's of course iPhoto, and for Linux users, there's usually an Image Viewer that works. It's difficult to say which of the Image Viewers included with Linux distributions is best. Figure 4-17: IrfanView is a free image viewer and editor for Windows users that supports other Windows and Mac platforms. ## Affordable Digital Photography Gadgets After you've chosen the best camera for your needs, you may find yourself wanting to augment it with a few high-tech accessories. Your local camera shop may carry many of these items, but if you're on a budget, you can often find them online.

Salah likes PSG for big links, says Sadio Salah is keen to play regularly for his club and has already sparked rumours of a January move away from Liverpool to Paris Saint-Germain. The 23-year-old Egypt international has scored a remarkable 54 goals in 91 appearances for Liverpool since arriving from Roma in the summer of 2012. "To start a new adventure, to play in a different country, it is a good opportunity," Salah told Sky Italia. "Also the return of the Champions League would be ideal. "I would like to play regularly for Liverpool. I want to be integrated and have more communication with the team. With an Italian side it would be harder because of my foreign origins." French national team coach Didier Deschamps, who could be keen to call up the No.11, was also quoted by Reuters on Wednesday to say the England forward was good "in the moment of the big moments" and could be "difficult to resist" when France is under the limelight. "It is really nice because he can make a difference when the team needs a difference," the 58-year-old coach said. Salah already has seven goals in seven games since being recalled by Rodgers from his ban in October for biting Chelsea defender Gary Cahill.

What's New In Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.0.0)?

In a blow to one of the developers of the now-defunct BitTorrent site Demonoid, the trial of two men accused of storing music on servers located at a Dutch data centre continues today. The September trial of Dutch citizen Mark Kostin, along with Jean-Christophe Bailliez, accuses them of creating a "honeypot" file-sharing site and storing more than 1.5 million music files on public servers in the Netherlands in 2008 and 2009. Kostin, 35, and Bailliez, 32, have each pleaded guilty to crimes that include copyright infringement. Kostin faces a €150,000 ($206,000) fine, while Bailliez could be fined up to €250,000 (roughly $346,000). Their trial will begin at 9:00AM local time (10:00AM ET). Kostin, who will appear in court wearing a black fedora, sued the Dutch government earlier this year, accusing prosecutors of colluding with the record labels. In July, a Dutch court struck down that complaint. The EU, Australian, US, and Canadian law enforcement agencies worked together to shut down Demonoid in late 2010. One of the servers allegedly used by Demonoid and BitTorrent site Mininova was based in the Netherlands, and a Dutch court agreed in December to extradite the Dutch pair to the UK. The Daily Dot reports that a number of Demonoid users received letters from the Dutch authorities in early 2011 ordering them to hand over their login credentials. BitTorrent tracker and forum tracker Mininova was also tracked down. It's also notable that European courts may have immunity from US laws, and can therefore never extradite a person from there to the US. US courts on the other hand have no such protection. The trial is also taking place against the backdrop of piracy in Europe; last week French authorities targeted 12 filesharing sites. Rights groups call for ending Israel's occupation of the West Bank, but that's an old strategy. By Alex Kane The Israeli newspaper Haaretz's front page this week carried the headline "Occupation, Bad, but Why?", and the subhead "The fact of the occupation cannot be erased from the political map." The subhead refers to the subject of this piece, but the story itself isn't about the occupation,
